
DOUGLAS COUNTY, Wash.—(AP) — The Daughters of the American Revolution have announced that they have raised funds to purchase and preserve the boundary stones of the District of Columbia, which were placed around the Ten-Mile Square in 1791. The stones were moved to the National Mall in 1919, but have been neglected and vandalized since then. The DAR plans to restore the stones and display them in a new stone court on the Mall.

The stones, which were originally made of limestone and granite, were set in place by surveyors under the direction of George Washington. The stones marked the boundaries of the District of Columbia, which was created in 1791 and is the site of the United States Capitol and other government buildings.

The DAR has been working to preserve the stones since the 1990s, and has raised over $500,000 to fund the restoration project. The stones will be placed in a new stone court on the National Mall, which is scheduled to open in 2024.

The DAR has been working with the National Park Service and other federal agencies to ensure that the stones are properly restored and maintained. The DAR is a national patriotic organization that promotes the preservation of American history and culture.

The stones will be placed in a new stone court on the National Mall, which is scheduled to open in 2024. The DAR has been working with the National Park Service and other federal agencies to ensure that the stones are properly restored and maintained.

The DAR is a national patriotic organization that promotes the preservation of American history and culture. The stones will be placed in a new stone court on the National Mall, which is scheduled to open in 2024.