Traffic Injuries Over Holidays Fatal to 3 Men

Virginia is Listed As the Nation's Most Accident-Prone State

There were 72 fatalities in traffic accidents during the Christmas-New Year holidays. This year's total is slightly higher than the 1950 count of 71 for the same two-week period. That made the state's fatality record the worst in the country. The following towns and cities had the highest death tolls: Charleston, West Virginia, 12; St. Louis, Missouri, 10; Chicago, Illinois, 8; St. Paul, Minnesota, 7; New York City, New York, 5.

Federal Highway Administration officials said the increase in traffic accidents was due primarily to a higher rate of speed on the roads, and they urged motorists to exercise extra caution.

In addition to the 72 fatalities, there were 3,897 accident victims in accident cases during the two-week period. This marked a 10% increase over the 1950 count.

The following towns and cities had the highest accident tolls: New York City, New York, 1,250; Chicago, Illinois, 600; St. Louis, Missouri, 450; Los Angeles, California, 380; Boston, Massachusetts, 220.

The Federal Highway Administration is planning to study the problem of traffic accidents to determine what can be done to reduce the number of fatalities and accidents.
